

European Commission

Towards an EU-US trade deal

Making trade work for you

The Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP)

We're listening and engaging

The European Commission is negotiating a new trade agreement with the US - the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership, or TTIP.

We know we'll only get the best deal - one that benefits as many Europeans as possible - if we involve everyone with a stake in the outcome, at every stage.

That's why we're consulting the public. And why we often meet:

- MEPs and governments
- our panel of outside experts
- firms and industry bodies
- consumer groups
- unions and NGOs.

We're also sharing all the documents we can.

Last updated: 28 March 2014

Trade

Towards an EU-US trade deal

Making trade work for you

1. Consulting and updating the public

We're using the web to get a clearer idea of the wider public's wishes and concerns.

Before the talks started we held three online consultations to better understand the measures people want us to take to boost EU-US trade and investment.

Visit the EU's webpages covering the EU-US trade talks: <http://ec.europa.eu/trade/policy/in-focus/ttip/>

You'll find latest news, key documents, and FAQs.

A fourth consultation asks for the public's views on our draft ideas on protecting investors. These include improvements to a system known as investor-state dispute settlement, or ISDS, which dates back over 30 years.

We also post regular updates on our dedicated webpages and on Twitter. And we regularly brief the press.

2. Conferring with governments and MEPs

In June 2013 the governments of the EU's 28 countries asked us to negotiate a draft deal with the US.

Their guidelines specified what we could and couldn't discuss, and our red lines.

We also have a legal duty to consult governments throughout the process.

Since the talks started in July 2013, we've taken part in over 40 different meetings - from detailed, technical discussions between trade policy officials, to meetings with Ministers.

We also have a duty to listen to the European Parliament.

We do this mainly through the Parliament's Committee for International Trade (or 'INTA').

The Committee has a US Monitoring Group, with members from the Parliament's main political groups.

Towards an EU-US trade deal

Making trade work for you

The European Parliament (EP) President, Martin Schulz, has also set up a group of MEPs to follow the talks. It includes the chairs of most of the Parliament's 20 committees.

Since talks started, the EU Trade Commissioner, Karel De Gucht, and senior Commission officials have taken part in 15 formal meetings in the Parliament.

We've also shared over 65 key documents and answered 80 written MEP questions.

The image shows a poster for a public conference on the EU-US Trade Agreement, featuring the text 'EU-US TRADE AGREEMENT | MYTHS & TRUTHS' and 'PUBLIC CONFERENCE ON 19 MARCH 2014 09:30 - 12:30'. Next to it is a screenshot of the Twitter profile for the EU TTIP Team (@EU_TTIP_team), which has 583 tweets, 106 following, and 6,000 followers. A tweet from the team is visible, stating: 'EU TTIP Team @EU_TTIP_team · 14 · @EU_TTIP_team Chief Negotiator: We want to hear from all stakeholders. This week I met unions, business, NGOs' pic.twitter.com/G0YGT6kuma'.

EU Chief Negotiator Ignacio Garcia Bercero and his team regularly speak at public meetings on the TTIP. They're also active on Twitter - @EU_TTIP_team.

3. Getting advice from outside experts

We recently set up a group of 14 outside experts.

They come from a variety of backgrounds and have extensive experience in:

- industry and commerce
- consumer affairs
- workers' rights
- environmental protection.

They'll give us high quality advice on the different topics on which we're negotiating.

Members' details and meeting reports are available online.

The image displays a grid of 14 individual headshots of members of the TTIP Advisory Group. The text 'TTIP Advisory Group' is centered over the grid.

We've set up a panel of 14 outside experts in business, consumer affairs, labour rights, and environmental protection, to advise our negotiators.

4. Hearing from other interest groups

We want to hear from everyone with a stake in this agreement.

We regularly meet people from firms large and small, and from industry bodies. This is, after all, a deal about the mechanics of doing business. So we need their input.

But we also listen to people from:

- consumer associations
- trades unions
- environmental groups and other NGOs.

For example, during and between each week-long negotiating round, we invite them to formal meetings with our Chief Negotiator and his team.

Here they get to:

- make presentations to us
- exchange views
- discuss substance and progress.

Towards an EU-US trade deal

Making trade work for you

Since 2012, we've held seven meetings in Brussels - each time with hundreds of people. We're also meeting to discuss a study underway to gauge the deal's likely impact on labour standards and the environment.

Over 650 people came to our TTIP interest group meeting in March 2014. Of those, 90 gave presentations and answered our team's questions.

And our doors are always open to anyone who wishes to tell us their hopes or concerns.

5. Sharing documents

We aim to share as many documents as possible - not just with governments and MEPs, but also with our panel and the public.

After we received the green light from EU governments, we took the unprecedented step of making our initial position papers public. We used these to set out the EU's goals - and tabled them in the talks themselves.

In fact we've published more than 50 documents online, including:

- factsheets and FAQs
- press releases and memos
- studies and meeting reports.

So far over 120,000 copies have been downloaded.

In any negotiation, partners need to build trust. For that they need a degree of confidentiality.

So there are some texts we can only show to governments and MEPs - like our offers to the US to:

- cut tariffs on goods they export to us
- open our services markets to their firms.

But at the end of the process, the whole deal will be open to scrutiny in any case.

And the final decision comes with a double democratic guarantee. Only a majority of both EU governments and MEPs can approve an agreement.

Contact us

Get updates at:
<http://ec.europa.eu/trade/policy/in-focus/ttip>

Follow us on Twitter:
@EU_TTIP_team

Call: 00800 67891011*
Write:
<http://europa.eu/europedirect>

Comment on texts:
<http://trade.ec.europa.eu/consultations>

* Calls can be made from anywhere in the EU, and are free from most EU landlines. Lines open 9.00-18.00 CET.